

Dear FCC:

The recent events in this country have made me very aware of the public's need for a variety of news media sources, from the left to the right. Neutrality is only achieved with polyvocality.

ClearChannel's recent abuse of its 1200 station majority voice have made me convinced that the FCC should rollback its deregulation attempts and enforce stricter standards on media ownership. No one corporate should be able to control a majority listenership in any territory. I believe the same should also apply for print (newspaper) media.

Sincerely,

Karen Nakamura
